LYMPHEDEMA AWARENESS MONTH

LYMPHEDEMA is an abnormal accumulation of protein-rich fluid due to a low volume (mechanical) insufficiency of the lymphatic system. Often, this is swelling of a body part, most often the extremities. However, it can occur in the face, trunk, abdomen, or other areas. Because the fluid accumulation is in the superficial tissues, it can have significant pathological and clinical consequences for the patient if left untreated. Once present, lymphedema is a chronic and progressive condition that will not disappear by itself.

Getting it Right!

Like cutting your own hair, it's nearly impossible to measure your own pupil distance.

Online ordering is handy, but not for your glasses.

Researchers of the AOA found:

- Over 21% of all lenses are not made as ordered.
- 9 out of 10 websites studies did not collect all necessary information required to dispense accurate spectacles.
- 44% failed at least one optical impact test.
