America's Numismatic Story Begins Here!

At the nation's founding, 250 years ago, the United States had no official coinage of its own and instead relied heavily on international money—most notably the Spanish silver Real—to conduct everyday commerce. During the colonial period and the early years after independence, chronic shortages of British coins and the absence of a national mint meant that Spanish reales, widely trusted for their consistent silver content and already familiar through global trade, circulated freely across the colonies and the new republic.

Congress formally acknowledged this reality by permitting foreign coins to remain legal tender, and Spanish denominations even influenced early American monetary units, including the dollar's decimal structure. This complete reliance lasted from 1776 until the passage of the Coinage Act of 1792 and the establishment of the U.S. Mint, which gradually replaced foreign coinage with a standardized national currency. Now a recently discovered, limited hoard of half reales from the famed El Cazador shipwreck brings treasure from America's dawn within reach once more!.

Silver Treasure from America's Founding

On January 11, 1784, the Spanish ship El Cazador set sail from Veracruz, Mexico, for the port of New Orleans, with a load of over 10 tons of pure Silver coins. Had the El Cazador made it to New Orleans, the map of today's United States would have been radically altered, and the Louisiana Purchase may never have happened! Each historic, shipwreck Silver coin is dated 1783 or earlier.

Classic Design known Around the Globe

The coins feature King Charles II of Spain, the inscription CAROLUS II DEI GRATIA ("by the grace of God"), and the mint year. The reverse reads HISPAN. ET. IND. REX ("King of Spain and the Indies"), followed by a mint mark, the assayer's initials, and the denomination ("R" = ½ real). The crowned shield of Castile & Leon is flanked by the Pillars of Hercules and the motto PLUS VLTRA ("More Beyond").

Scarce Piece of History - Very Limited to Only 250 Coins!

Shipwreck coins with guaranteed provenance are a finite resource and are swiftly disappearing into private hands. Fewer and fewer exist in desirable collector condition. Each coin is in genuine shipwreck condition and arrives secured for posterity in a sealed holder. Demand is expected to be strong. Please note that this is a limited time offer. So call now before this opportunity passes you by. Don't Miss Out!

Prized Silver and History Together!

Silver is a time-honored way to balance portfolios in times of market volatility. When there is turmoil in the financial sector (such as the recent concerns over inflation and tariffs) silver generally rises in value. While it is estimated that 90% of the world's Silver has already been mined, and much is reserved for today's technological and health care applications. In the last 12 months, the value of precious Silver alone has increased over 100% in value to all-time record highs.
